

To whom it may concern:

I'm absolutely amazed that this is even an issue. I can't believe that we're wasting money on such a thing. XM has a place in our life and should be allowed to broadcast news and weather.

Unless I'm missing some important issue, to not allow XM to broadcast cities weather and radio goes against any sound logic and I'm sure some freedoms are being violated. As a matter of fact, it makes more sense to allow XM the ability to do this and even expand their capabilities. Do you know how difficult it is to find traffic and weather reports when getting ready to travel to, or visiting, a new city? Seems like it would also be much safer knowing how to find this info instead of playing around with the buttons on a radio.

I think prohibiting XM from broadcasting traffic and weather would go beyond what the FCC should be doing.
